

A black and white halftone photograph showing a person from the chest up. The person is wearing a dark, button-down shirt under a light-colored, possibly white, jacket. They are standing against a dark, textured background that appears to be a wall or a piece of furniture. The lighting is somewhat dim, creating soft shadows on the person's clothing.

Figure 1. A schematic diagram of the experimental setup. The laser beam passes through a lens and a polarizer, and is focused onto the sample surface by a lens. The reflected light is collected by a lens and focused onto a photomultiplier tube.

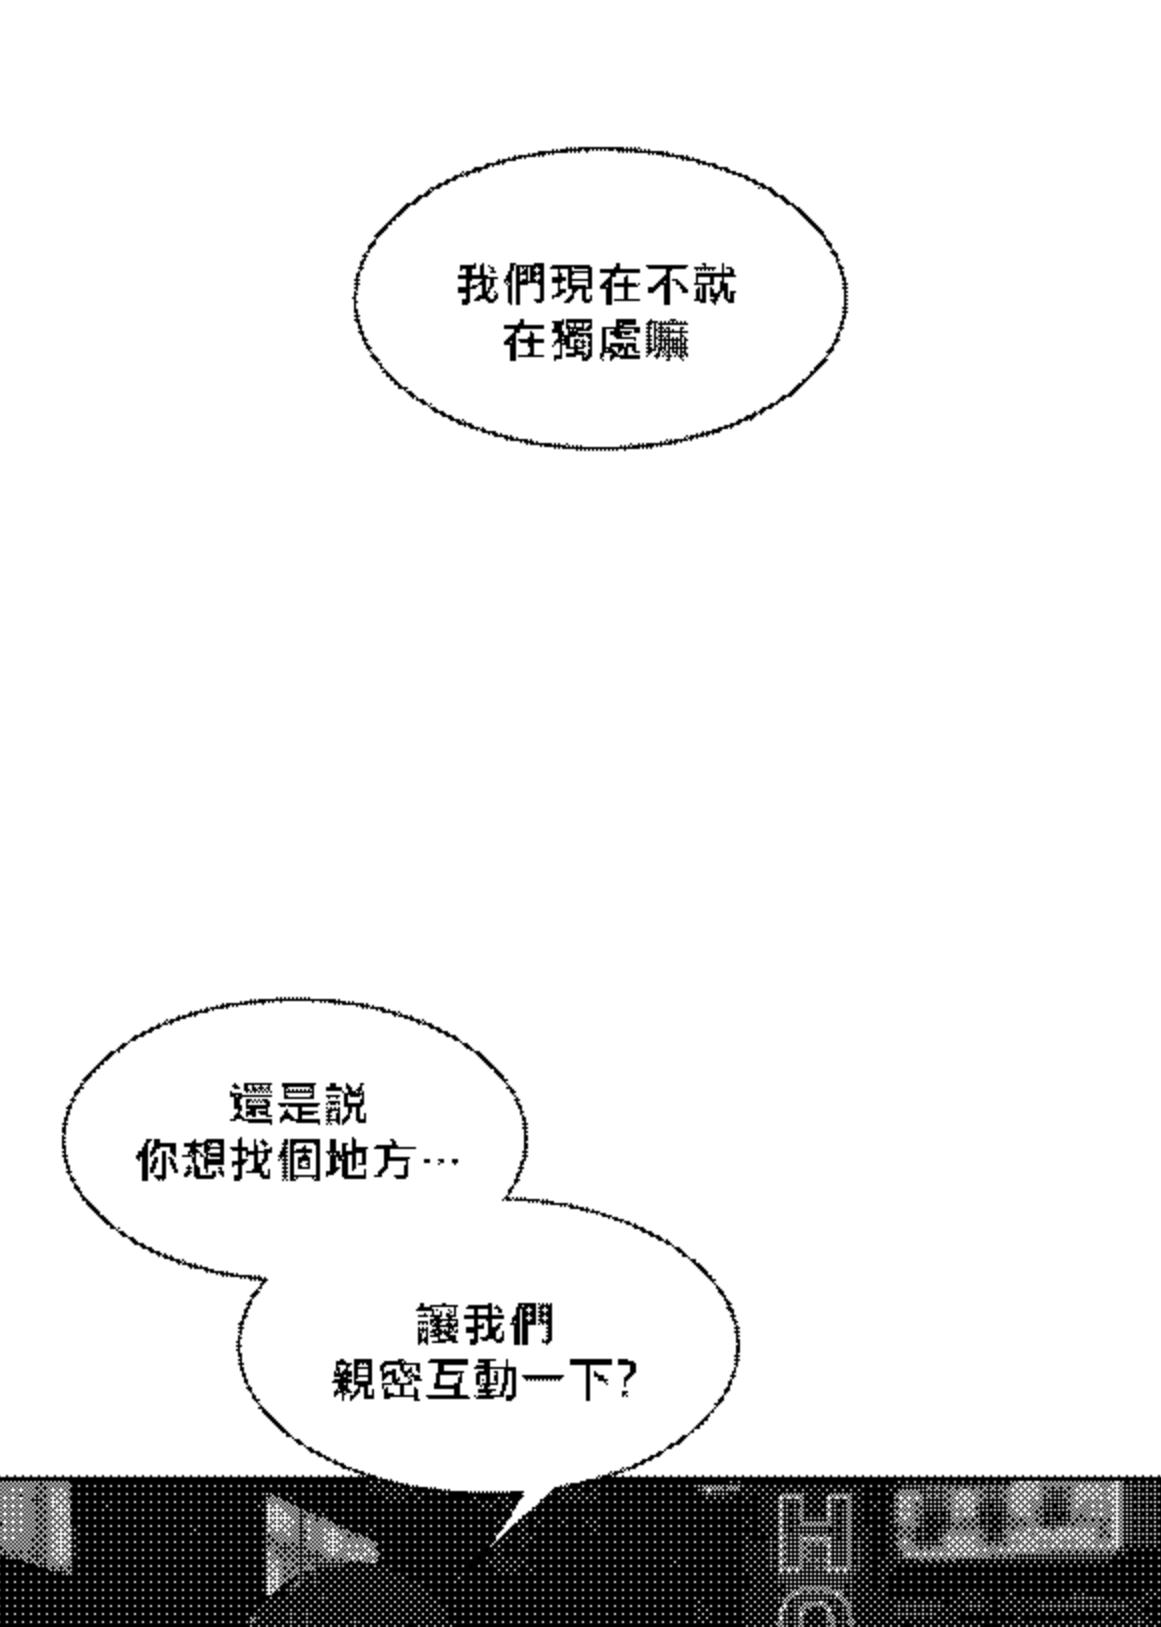

This image is a high-contrast, black-and-white photograph. It features a dense, granular texture across most of its area, resembling a close-up of a rough surface or a heavily processed image. In the upper portion, there are several bright, irregular shapes that appear to be highlights or reflections on the surface. The overall quality is grainy and lacks fine detail due to the high contrast.

A black and white halftone photograph of a person's face, showing a profile view of their head and shoulders. The image is composed of a grid of dots.
